In the thirty-five years of its existence, the RSC has established itself as a premier research institution with an international reputation. This attracts many scientists from within Australia and overseas, for short to medium term visits to the School that often lead to collaborative research projects, such as those detailed below. A number of these projects include collaborations with industry where companies provide support to carry out both basic and applied research. A further measure of the stature of the staff of the School is the large number of invitations they receive to present lectures at international conferences and workshops, and at overseas institutions.

Collaborative Research Projects

Academic Visitors

Conference Presentations

Invited Lectures

Service to External Organisations

Outreach Activities